

SON-IN-LAW, SEEKING WIFE, KILLS WOMAN

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Nov. 8.—Mrs. Nettie Rose, aged forty-eight, was shot to death yesterday in the kitchen at her home by her son-in-law, George M. Kauffman, who quarreled with her because she would not aid him in locating his wife, Ella Kauffman, who left him Monday in Cleveland, Ohio, where they had been living for the last three years.

Kauffman surrendered at police headquarters directly after the shooting, to which there were no witnesses, and made a confession to Justice John H. Bitner and former Sheriff Bruce S. Zeller.

His wife did not come here, it is said.

The body was discovered by Brendon Rose, a son of the slain woman. He went home from a shop, where he is employed, and found his mother's body lying upon the kitchen floor in front of the cooking stove, in which a meal was cooking. The table had been neatly arranged. He also found a revolver with four chambers empty in the front hallway. He immediately summoned the police.

A coroner's jury found that Kauffman had killed Mrs. Rose with "malice aforethought."

Dr. Watkins and Dr. Morrison performed an autopsy on Mrs. Rose's body. Three bullets entered her side and one her hip, any of which, it is said, would have been fatal.

Kauffman visited Mrs. Rose Thursday night and had a stormy interview with her, it is reported, leaving at midnight in an angry mood. It is said he failed to obtain from Mrs. Rose any information as to his wife's whereabouts. Yesterday Kauffman again visited Mrs. Rose and, finding she was in the house except his mother-in-law, it is presumed, he shot her when she refused to aid him in finding her daughter.

Before going to Ohio Kauffman was a locomotive fireman on the Norfolk and Western Railway here. He held a job as railroad freight conductor at Cleveland.

Conspiracy for Election Day to Establish Revolutionary Rule Discovered.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—A "red plot" against the throne on Italian election day and the ultimate establishment of a revolutionary government has been discovered by the Italian police, according to a press dispatch from Rome today.

The government agents at Rome and elsewhere are said to possess evidence that great sums of money have been sent into Italy from Russia. Propaganda for a world-wide revolution was said to have been found among pamphlets seized by the police.

AUDIENCE CHARMED BY FRIEDA HEMPEL

Pure vocal art is a rare achievement today. The singer whose art may be gauged for its technique, in the same way that one estimates the execution of a pianist, may today be counted on one hand and then not use the thumb.

Such an artist is Mme. Frieda Hempel, who opened the Ten-Star Concerts of T. Arthur Smith at the National Theater yesterday afternoon with a capacity house calling for seats even on the stage. She had as her assisting artists Conrad V. Bos, pianist, and A. Rodeman, flutist.

The singer, too, was quite the most attractive concert figure to come to us, with her peacock velvet gown and the "song-bird" emphasized by the flowing ostrich feather sash of the same lovely hue that waved like a gently-blown willow.

In flute-like tones, and tone-pure runs in staccato, in smooth, even flow of clear sound, in thrills held astonishingly long and evenly, Miss Hempel's songs abounded. Such was the Mozart-Adam aria di bravura, with flute accompaniment. The pure intonation in passages alone with flute was lovely, while in the "Blue Danube Waltz," with all its efflorescence of roulades and joyous metre was shown a distinctive art of singing. The art, it is true, one is conscious of. Therein is the one theatrical point of the coloratura as a rule.

The French group of songs held two characteristic songs of tiny, capricious music figures. They were "Guitares au Mandoline" of Saint-Saens, and "Fates Galantes" of Hahn, in both of which the accompaniments of Mr. Bos were given with that great fineness of delineation for which he is justly famous. Bemberg's "La Fee aux Chansons" was a beautiful song rich in admirable vocalization. The "Troyer 'Sun God'" song was too big for the voice. It lends itself rather, and with compelling charm, to lightness and graceful ornament.

Miss Hempel gave as encores "Daddy's Sweetheart," "Dixie," "The Last Rose of Summer" and "Home, Sweet Home." She left the art realm for appeal to the heart.

Mr. Bos also was soloist, giving with particular effect the Beethoven "To Elise," one of the singing compositions of the master. Mr. Rodeman also gave a group of solos.
